DOMAIN NAME PROCESS

A domain name is a personal or business home address known as a website or space on the internet which is owned by the owner as personal property. These sites provide information that may be accessed by the public through the domain names on the Internet.

DETAILS

Unique Domain Name

Domain names must be unique as they're the identity of website owners on the internet. It is advised to do thorough research to pick a domain name and also choose a design that is distinct from other domains.

WIPO

The World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO) was formed to deal with the procedures for development and ownership along with maintenance issues related to the domains.

Registration of Domain

The registration of the domain name can be done in consonance with the procedure issued by the WIPO through an independent domain registrar or with a web hosting service provider.

Web-Hosting

A domain name can remain reserved until you host a web and use your name for the website. If you already have a setup account with a hosting company, you can complete the registration process and search for the unique domain name with the help of your web hosting service provider.

Registration of Website

To register your website, you shall provide the proposed domain name and contact details like the physical location, phone numbers, and email address, etc. You may be asked to sign a contract and it is advisable to confirm the details of the registrar as they are important in case of transferring the ownership of the domain.
